First day

Justice Elena Kagan unveils her Supreme Court style in debut argument

MCT

Justice Elena Kagan threw herself into her new job Monday with an aggressive performance during the Supreme Court's inaugural oral argument of the 2010 term.

During the first hour of her judicial debut, Kagan asked infinitely more questions than Justice Clarence Thomas did during all of last year. If first impressions hold true, the former Harvard Law School dean will be one of the court's most active and engaged members.

"Let's stay with this," Kagan told one attorney before she launched into her first query of the day.

Kagan asked 10 questions during the oral argument in a fairly arcane case involving income deductions and bankruptcy law. This was more than most of her colleagues and far more than Thomas, who kept his habitual silence Monday.

Thomas didn't speak during the 70-plus hours of oral argument that made up the 2009 term. He's said that he doesn't find much value in interrupting attorneys. His colleagues never hesitate to do so, and they spoke Monday in their characteristic ways.

Justice Antonin Scalia often is pointed and colloquial.

"I'm trying to help you, Mr. Burke," Scalia told one struggling attorney.

Justice Stephen Breyer likes to engage in hypotheticals.

"Suppose you buy a dozen apples each month," Breyer posited.

Chief Justice John Roberts Jr. is blunt.

"Your argument leads to a conclusion that is as absurd as your opponent's," Roberts told one attorney Monday.

While Kagan didn't crack any jokes Monday, she sounded relaxed and threw out a combination of hypothetical questions and fact-based queries. When she wasn't asking questions, she often was leaning forward in her seat.

Kagan sat in the far left chair, reserved by custom for the court's junior justice. The far-right chair, assigned to the second-most-junior justice, now is held by a fellow Obama administration appointee, Justice Sonia Sotomayor.

Kagan hasn't yet written any opinions, though she has announced that she will recuse herself from a number of cases because of her prior work as the Obama administration's solicitor general.

This week, for instance, the court is hearing seven cases. Kagan has recused herself from four of them.

DIGIT

At age 50, Justice Elena Kagan is the youngest member of the current Supreme Court. She could be serving for several decades. The man she replaced, John Paul Stevens, retired at age 90 after serving for about 35 years.

SURVEY: MOST OCEAN LIFE UNKNOWN

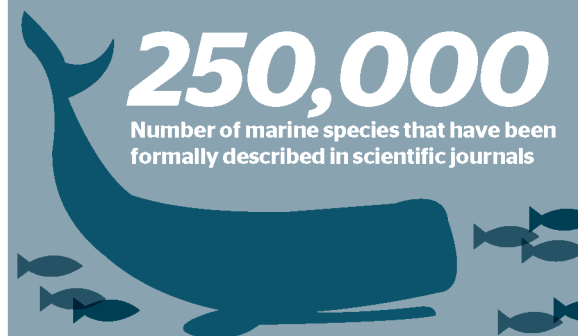

The planet's seas and oceans are richer and more diverse than scientists suspected, the biggest survey of marine life has revealed—but many mysteries remain.

The Census of Marine Life, which announced its full findings Monday in London, has taken 10 years to complete, employing 2,700 scientists from 80 nations. The $650 million study surveyed everything from the coldest waters to the warmest lagoons, from the smallest microbes to the largest cetaceans (really big ocean mammals, like whales). It was initiated by researchers from Rutgers University and the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation in New York. CNN

Little Village's ride to nowhere

When Marisol Becerra of Little Village wants to shop at Target, she brings a few family members because she needs the extra hands.

Becerra said her family walks the purchases home from the McKinley Park store in a half-hour journey that would be a lot easier if there were a CTA bus route along 31st Street.

"It's been difficult," Becerra, 21, said about public transit options in Little Village. "We have no accessible bus that goes directly to downtown."

For years, Little Village residents have been pushing for a route along 31st Street. The CTA eliminated the No. 31 bus, which traveled along 31st, in 1997 because of low ridership.

Residents are so frustrated by the lack of CTA service, they're considering creating a community-run bus service that would travel between Cicero Avenue and 31st Street Beach.

"It's just a concept right now," said Mike Pitula, community organizer for The Little Village Environmental Justice Organization, a group that seeks to improve the neighborhood's quality of life. "The demand is high, and people are also looking for work opportunities."

The organization is holding a community meeting about transit options from 1-3 p.m. Saturday at 2745 S. Lawndale Ave.

There's already money set aside to test a 31st Street route. In 2008, the RTA board, which oversees the CTA's funding, approved money for a route between Cicero Avenue and King Drive, which would run from 5 a.m.-8 p.m. daily.

The $1 million in federal funding came from a grant through a program to improve accessibility for low-income residents, among other initiatives.

But the CTA can't come up with the $1 million in matching funds, so the route has gone nowhere.

The CTA said it continues to work on finalizing the details of the 31st Street bus experiment, but also pointed out the agency cut 18 percent of its bus service earlier this year and doesn't have the resources to add new routes.

Men are more likely to experience orgasm when vaginal intercourse is involved, while women are more likely to reach orgasm when they engage in variety of acts, including oral sex, said researcher Debra Herbenick, lead author of the section about women's sex lives. NEW SURVEY LOOKS AT WAYS IN WHICH NATION IS GETTING IT ON

Associated Press

The male-female orgasm gap. The sex lives of 14-year-olds.

An intriguing breakdown of condom usage rates, by age and ethnicity, with teens emerging as more safe-sex-conscious than boomers. That's just a tiny sampling of the data unveiled Monday in what the researchers say is the largest, most comprehensive national survey of Americans' sexual behavior since 1994.

Filling 130 pages of a special issue of the Journal of Sexual Medicine, the study offers detailed findings on how often Americans have sex, with whom, and how they respond. In all, 5,865 people, ranging in age from 14 to 94, participated in the survey.

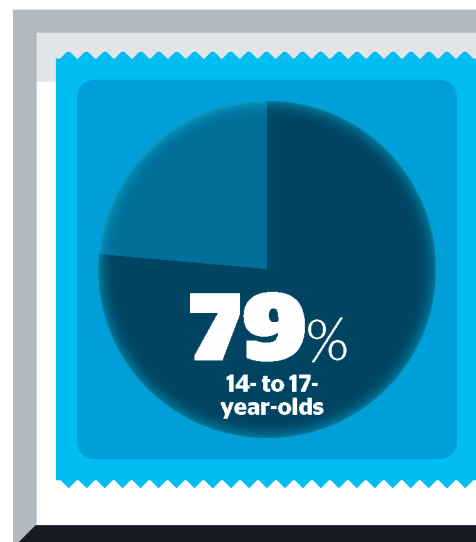

The lead researchers, from Indiana University's Center for Sexual Health Promotion, said the study fills a void that has grown since the last comparable endeavor—the National Health and Social Life Survey—was published 16 years ago. Major changes since then include the spread of sexually transmitted diseases, the types of sex education available to young people, the advent of same-sex marriage and the emergence of the Internet as a tool for social interaction.

Dr. Dennis Fortenberry, a pediatrics professor who was lead author of the study's section about teen sex, said the overall findings of such a huge survey should provide reassurance to Americans who are curious about how their sex lives compare with others.

"Unless, like al-Qaida, you feel there's something abnormal about the American people, what these data say is, 'This is normal—everything in there is normal.'"

The study, which began taking shape in 2007, was funded by Church & Dwight Co., the manufacturer of Trojan condoms. Questions about condom usage figured prominently in the study, but the researchers—during a teleconference—insisted the integrity of their findings was not affected by the corporate tie.

The survey was conducted from March through May of 2009, with the assistance of Knowledge Networks, among a nationally representative sample of adolescents

CONDOM USE

Among the findings was a high rate of condom usage among 14- to 17-year-olds. Of the surveyed boys who had sexual intercourse, 79 percent reported using a condom on the most recent occasion, compared with 25 percent for all the men in the survey. However, the sample for that particular question involved only 57 teens in the 14-to-17 age range. That's far smaller than the thousands involved in latest federal Youth Risk Behavior Survey last year, which calculated condom use among sexually active high school students at 61 percent.

Another intriguing finding—rates of condom usage among black and Hispanic men were significantly higher than for whites. The researchers said this suggested that HIV-AIDS awareness programs were now making headway in those communities, which have relatively high rates of the disease.

The lowest condom usage rates were for men over 50—and the researchers said this was worrisome, raising the risk for disease since an increasing number of older adults had multiple sexual partners.

and adults. Once people were selected to participate, they were interviewed online; participants without Internet access were provided it for free.

The researchers said the 1994 survey was compiled through in-person interviews, while the new method—collecting data over the Internet—may help make respondents more comfortable about discussing sexual behaviors.

Dr. Irwin Goldstein, editor in chief of the Journal of Sexual Medicine, noted that the new study came more than 60 years after Alfred Kinsey—also based at Indiana University—published his groundbreaking report, "Sexual Behavior in the Human Male."

The study cannot be generalized to gay, lesbian or bisexual individuals because the sample may obscure data points involving minority groups, the authors wrote.

"Just like then, these papers contain material that is avant garde and often considered off-limits," Goldstein wrote in a forward to the study. "At a time when we can have nudity on HBO but cannot use the names of our genitals on the evening news, there remains a need to continue research on sexual health." BLOOMBERG, CNN CONTRIBUTED.

LGBT identification

While about 7 percent of adult women and 8 percent of men identify as gay, lesbian or bisexual, the proportion of individuals who have had same-gender sex at some point in their lives is higher.

Age of intercourse

Among adolescent boys, only about 2 percent of the 14-year-olds—but 40 percent of the 17-year-olds—said they had engaged in sexual intercourse in the past year.

National position on positions

About 40 percent of women ages 20 to 49 and of men ages 25 to 59 have had anal sex, the study found. More than 80 percent of women ages 20 through 49, and over 85 percent of men the same age had received oral sex, the study found.

About a third of national health-care costs are related to sexuality, former U.S. Surgeon General Joycelyn Elders wrote in an editorial related to the survey. For doctors to provide information and adequate treatment to their patients, they need to know what the community's sexual behavior is, Elders wrote.

15 PERCENT OF THE MEN AGES 50-59 SAID THEY HAD RECEIVED ORAL SEX FROM ANOTHER MAN AT SOME POINT

An earful for Emanuel

Dissenters tell likely mayoral candidate to prepare for a tough campaign

Chicago Tribune

As he embarked Monday on his all-but-official campaign for Chicago mayor, Rahm Emanuel hit the streets of Chicago by inviting residents to "tell it like it is." And before lunchtime, he got what he was asking for.

Days after resigning as White House chief of staff, the former North Side congressman invited the media to follow him as he bopped around a carefully selected set of neighborhoods—from an "L" stop in the South Loop and a diner in Chatham to a popular Mexican restaurant in Pilsen and the shops along Devon Avenue.

But as he wolfed down scrambled eggs and sipped coffee at Izola's Restaurant on 79th Street with three patrons, some residents tried to interrupt, blaming the former White House strategist for a lack of jobs on the South Side. As the cameras rolled, Emanuel stood up and tried to quell the simmering scene, explaining how he felt the Obama administration had helped create jobs.

"You are going to be asked some hardball questions and get your bat out," Paul Johnson, 49, told Emanuel. "Welcome to Chicago."

It wasn't necessarily the welcome Emanuel envisioned. After spending most of the past two years living in Washington, D.C., Emanuel begins his campaign trying to get voters to view him as a Chicagoan and not an interloper.

The hometown issue is legal as well as political for Emanuel, who is likely to face a challenge from rivals over local law that requires candidates for mayor to be a city resident for a year before the February election.

Emanuel, who grew up in the suburbs, said he was born in Chicago, raised in the "greater Chicago area" and owns a home in the city where he has raised his family.

"I have spent my entire life, outside of going to college and working at the White House, here in the city of Chicago," he said. "The Board of Elections will decide this; that's the proper place."

Emanuel said residents aren't "really interested in my residency. They are interested, as residents of the city of Chicago, in meeting the challenges that face this city from crime, drugs, violence, school improvement and job creation."

Top Stroger aide arrested

Chicago Tribune

Authorities on Monday arrested a top aide to Cook County Board President Todd Stroger as part of a probe into whether contracts were steered to the aide's company and her associates.

Carla Oglesby was taken into custody between 3:45 and 4 p.m. by investigators in connection with the ongoing public corruption investigation, according to a spokeswoman for the Cook County State's Attorney's office. Sally Daly said state's attorney's investigators detained Oglesby as she was pulling out of a parking garage near Lake and Dearborn streets.

Investigators were looking into a series of contracts that came in just below $25,000—the threshold triggering approval by the County Board.

The charges were not being made public Monday night, but Cook County State's Attorney Anita Alvarez was expected to hold a news conference on the arrest Tuesday afternoon following Oglesby's bond hearing, said Dan Kirk, Alvarez's chief of staff. He said Oglesby could be charged with theft and official misconduct.

The Tribune reported in June that the broadening probe aims to determine whether any work actually was done. The contracts were among at least 11 sought by Oglesby.

Oglesby, a one-time promoter of sports stars and hip-hop artists, was the spokeswoman for Stroger's failed Democratic primary re-election campaign. Stroger briefly suspended Oglesby earlier this year from her $120,000-a-year county job after reports that she authorized a $24,975 contract to her public relations firm, CGC Communications, to inform suburban residents about federal flood relief grants.

Later, it came out that Oglesby sought approval to spend nearly $150,000 on census outreach contracts. The deals were given to people recommended by Oglesby and Eugene Mullins, Stroger's spokesman and boyhood friend.

High Court passes on alderman case

The U.S. Supreme Court on Monday declined to review a decision by a federal appeals court in Chicago overturning former Chicago Ald. Ed Vrdolyak's probation sentence for his 2009 fraud conviction, clearing the way for his re-sentencing later this month.

In January, a three-judge panel reversed the controversial sentence in which Vrdolyak avoided the prison sentence sought by prosecutors. TRIBUNE

A $40M face-lift for Union Station

Chicago Tribune

The elegant but often-sweaty Great Hall at Chicago Union Station will be air-conditioned by next summer, and other improvements including more restrooms at track level are being added as part of a $40 million rehabilitation project announced Monday.

The new passenger-friendly amenities are intended to update the 85-year-old historic station at a time when Amtrak ridership has grown more than 40 percent in the past 12 years, officials said.

"This project is going to be part of the revival of passenger rail," said Tom Carper, chairman of the Amtrak board. Seating in Amtrak's boarding lounges at Union Station will be expanded to 950 seats, which is almost double the existing capacity, officials said.

The work, scheduled for completion in late 2012, will be followed by redevelopment of Union Station's headhouse building to include retail businesses.

"This is a very important investment to make sure Union Station is 21st century ready," Gov. Pat Quinn said during a news conference at the station.

The $40 million project is being paid for from Amtrak's capital budget, which is funded by the federal government.

Former Chicagoan is new Twitter CEO

Chicago Tribune

Former Chicagoan Dick Costolo has been elevated to chief executive of Twitter, where he had been chief operating officer for the past year.

Twitter co-founder Evan Williams, who had been CEO of the microblogging service since 2008, announced the change Monday on the company's official blog. Williams said he's staying with Twitter and will "be completely focused on product strategy."

Costolo was co-founder and CEO of Feed-Burner, a Chicago-based startup acquired by Google in 2007.

Williams noted that Twitter has experienced massive growth in his two-year tenure. The number of employees at the company has grown to 300 from 20 in that period, and the service has seen its number of registered users skyrocket to more than 165 million from 3 million.

Those users are creating 90 million tweets per day, compared with 1.25 million daily tweets two years ago.

"During [Costolo's] year at Twitter, he has been a critical leader in devising and executing our revenue efforts, while simultaneously and effectively making the trains run on time in the office," Williams wrote in his blog post.

Feds investigating Verizon

The U.S. Federal Communications Commission has confirmed it is investigating a reported $50 million in “mystery fees” charged to mobile phone users by Verizon Wireless.

A defect in Verizon’s phone software caused at least 15 million wireless customers to be charged data fees, even if they didn’t subscribe to data plans, Verizon said in a statement Sunday. Most customers received false charges of $2 to $6, which will be credited to customers’ bills in October and November.

The refund is said to be one of the largest in wireless network history.

“The majority of the data sessions involved minor data exchanges caused by software built into their phones; others included accessing certain Web links, which should not have incurred charges,” Verizon’s statement said. “We have addressed these issues to avoid unintended data charges in the future.”

The FCC, meanwhile, has been investigating the issue since January, when it first got word of the erroneous fees from consumers, according to a statement released Sunday by Michele Ellison, the FCC’s enforcement bureau chief.

“We’re gratified to see Verizon agree to finally repay its customers. But questions remain as to why it took Verizon two years to reimburse its customers and why greater disclosure and other corrective actions did not come much, much sooner,” Ellison said.

“The Enforcement Bureau will continue to explore these issues, including the possibility of additional penalties, to ensure that all companies prioritize the interests of consumers when billing problems occur.”

7 MANILA, Philippines Lady Gaga is on board in spirit, and she’s part of the safety demonstration—how to put on your seat belt, how to put on the oxygen mask if needed.

The singer’s song “Just Dance” serves as background music for a safety demonstration aboard some Cebu Pacific Air flights. Several of the Philippine airline’s flight attendants do the “safety dance” in choreographed moves in a YouTube video that has gone viral.

Passengers get a serious safety demo, followed by the dance, according to Candice Iyog, the airline’s vice president for marketing and distribution.

“We do not compromise safety in anything we do and it will remain our primary concern. We just really know how to have fun too,” Iyog said.

THE DIGIT

47.3%

That’s the percentage of people 25 years or older who live in the Washington, D.C., metro area who have bachelor’s, master’s, professional school or doctorate degrees, according to new Census Bureau data released Tuesday. That makes Washington the country’s brainiest metro area. Cleveland ranked last.

OUCH FACTOR

How bad do these injuries hurt Chicago's teams? An unscientific look:

Team on life support

This is really gonna hurt

Rub some dirt on it

Quit your bellyaching

Jay Cutler

Even though he looked about as good as Lindsay Lohan at last call, Cutler is irreplaceable. He suffered a mild concussion Sunday night but is expected to play Sunday at Carolina. How well he'll recover from the beating he took in New York remains to be seen, but the Bears need him to be the QB he was in the first three games of the season.

BRIAN CASSELLA/TRIBUNE PHOTO

OUCH FACTOR

The big hurts

With these athletes ailing, Chicago teams feeling the pain

Chicago sports are hurting.

More specifically, Carlos Boozer, Ronnie Brewer, Brian Campbell, Todd Collins and, last but not least, Jay Cutler are hurting.

But how significant are their injuries? And by significant, we mean, how much does their personal injury hurt their team? We've got our own RedEye scale to nail it down. REDEYE

Carlos Boozer

Boozer's broken right hand will keep the big man out of the Bulls lineup for about eight weeks, meaning he'll miss about 15 regular-season games—including the traditionally difficult November circus trip. Taj Gibson will start in his place, but since Boozer hasn't played for the Bulls yet, does he really need to be replaced?

OUCH FACTOR

Ronnie Brewer

There must have been something in the water in Utah.

Brewer, Boozer's Jazz teammate, won't play Tuesday in the Bulls' preseason opener due to a sore right hamstring. When healthy, he's expected to start at shooting guard. For now, Keith Bogans takes his place.

OUCH FACTOR

Brian Campbell

A knee strain is the culprit in Campbell's case. He injured it in a preseason game Friday against Pittsburgh, and he'll be out four to five weeks. When he went down after an Alex Ovechkin hit last season, the Blackhawks struggled without him.

OUCH FACTOR

Todd Collins

Like Jay Cutler before him, Collins was knocked out of Sunday night's game after being sacked. He suffered a stinger, opening the door for third-stringer Caleb Hanie to get some playing time. The Bears didn't really miss Collins, who was just as ineffective as Cutler at quarterback.

OUCH FACTOR

These Bears are hard to stomach

Sunday was not the best game for the Bears. It was painful to watch (also, probably super painful to play in).

So who exactly are the Bears? They're in first place, so it's tough to be too down on them. But there's this lingering feeling that the wheels could fall off at any moment. Are they really who we thought they were?

They're arguably the shakiest 3-1 team of all time. The best analogy I can make is they're the Spam of the NFL. Their success is shrouded in mystery: It's definitely not pretty and you don't know what they're made of. In the end, there's a pretty good chance they'll make you sick.

It's hard to complain about being 3-1, but it seems like smoke and mirrors. Sure, Julius Peppers probably is earning his contract, and Jay Cutler finally was playing like he wasn't concussed at all times (too soon?).

But there are more flaws with the team than on Derrick Rose's ACT.

There's a coach who can't coach, a running game that isn't good at running and an offensive line that couldn't block someone on Facebook. There are more sacks in a Bears game than in an Adam Lambert video. Those are not exactly the ingredients to winning.

And now Todd Collins and Caleb Hanie, both of whom I would have guessed were out of football for years, actually could play meaningful minutes.

Call me Debbie Downer (Scottie Sourpants? In retrospect, maybe don't call me that), but I just can't believe in this team. I've always felt the real Bears are the ones who played against the Giants, not the ones who (sort of) beat the Lions, Cowboys and Packers. The Bears could be about to take a knee up nine points with 20 seconds left in the Super Bowl and I'd feel confident they'd find a way to blow it—hopefully involving laterals, as those are awesome.

If they keep playing the way they did Sunday, there's going to be a lot more people in Chicago saying “No thanks” to Spam.

1 What should Bulls fans look for in the preseason opener Tuesday in Milwaukee?

Dwya ... LeBro ... Carne ... OK, can they least count on a hot dog vendor coming?

Any bags that might be on the court that could further injure our team.

Gym bags strewn across the floor. Watch your step!

Earl Boykins will dribble between Joakim Noah's legs. Like, his whole body, right through the wickets.

The Omer Asik Experience.

2 Injuries are to Carlos Boozer as ...

... Bears offensive linemen are to healthy quarter-backs.

... obnoxious, self-important, self-centered tweets are to LeBron James.

... Auto-Tune is to Ke$ha's career. Can't have one without the other.

... a crappy passing game is to the Bears. Change whatever you want, it'll be the same result.

... tantrums are to Carlos Zambrano.

3 Joakim Noah's getting a 5-year, $60 million extension. What should he buy first?

Hair extensions. Your day of reckoning is at hand, Troy Polamalu ...

A stylist.

A River North penthouse condo—for his favorite Tuesday Five on Five personality. Not you, Julie.

Well if he buys cognac and marijuana, he should probably keep that inside his house.

Cleveland.

4 What's the worst thing about Chicago baseball being gone until next season?

That's like asking me to find the cloud in the silver lining.

Without the Cubs to spread it around, my pent-up rage will be focused on the Bears like a laser.

ERROR. ERROR. DOES NOT COMPUTE. DIVISION BY ZERO.

Chicago baseball has been gone for three weeks; why ask this now?

That it's coming back?

5 How will we find out the Cubs have decided on a new manager?

Usually Satan schedules a two-week vacation immediately afterward.

After all the best candidates are hired, Hendry will hold a presser stating he wanted Mike Quade "all along."

Right here, right now: The Cubs are going to offer it to Mike Quade. Book it. Done.

Tom Ricketts will have "OK, this time for real" added to all the "Year One" billboards.

With a LeBron-esque "The Decision"-type show on ESPN2.

It's very exciting. I'm happy I'll be here for a while. And I feel like the Bulls definitely did me right. I promise I'm going to give 150 percent every time I'm out there."

— Bulls center Joakim Noah during a press conference Monday announcing his five-year, $60 million deal.

» Viktor Stalberg claimed the open forward spot on the Blackhawks when the team sent 19-year-old Jeremy Morin to Rockford of the AHL on Monday. The Hawks now have 13 forwards on their roster, and that's not expected to change before the regular-season opener Thursday.

» Comcast SportsNet said Monday it is picking up DirecTV's newly syndicated video simulcast of Fox Sports Radio's "The Dan Patrick Show." Patrick's show will run live from 8-11 a.m. weekdays, beginning Oct. 25.

FINAL SCORE:

» Europe wins Ryder Cup 14½ to 13½ points.

Zambrano's accident not the first crash in Chicago sports

Car insurance rates for star athletes must be skyrocketing these days. Tiger Woods mauled some neighbor's tree with his SUV in December. Tom Brady ended up in a fender bender last month. And now Cubs pitcher Carlos Zambrano's car looks to be ticketed for the disabled list.

According to Twitter reports from David Kaplan of the Tribune and WGN Radio, witnesses reported that Zambrano damaged his car Monday morning in his haste to leave Wrigley Field after he and his teammates cleaned out their lockers. The accident was said to be minor, but Zambrano's car reportedly sustained significant damage.

Zambrano joins a growing list of Chicago athletes who have been fortunate enough to walk away from a car accident. REDEYE

Dennis Rodman

A scratched finger was the only injury the former Bulls star sustained after riding in an SUV that flipped over on an interstate in South Florida in August. "I'm still living, brother," Rodman told his agent. "They can't get rid of me." Score one for seat belts.

Carlos Marmol

The Cubs' ace reliever needed seven stitches in his forehead in October 2008 after being involved in an accident in the Dominican Republic. The incident occurred just days after the Cubs were ousted from the NL Division Series. The Cubs' playoff utility strikes again.

Lance Briggs

The linebacker crashed his Lamborghini on the Edens Expressway in August 2007 and left it there. He was fined $485 for leaving the scene of a property damage accident. The car still isn't speaking to Briggs.

Brian Urlacher

In December 2005, the Bears captain's car suffered damage when it was rear-ended, but he and his daughter were unhurt. The other driver surely is off his Christmas card list.

Huge celebs and lots of local flavor highlight the Chicago International Film Festival

By Matt Pais

Yes, there are plenty of tiny, worthy movies at this year's Chicago International Film Festival starring actors you've never heard of. There also are lots of flicks starring celebs such as Edward Norton (who appears at Thursday's red carpet premiere), Natalie Portman and Hilary Swank, plus many movies with a Chicago connection. See stars in each category with our mini-reviews below. Read first; watch later!

MATT PAIS IS THE METROMIX MOVIES AND MUSIC PRODUCER. MPAIS@TRIBUNE.COM

46TH ANNUAL Chicago International Film Festival

When: Oct. 7-21

Where: AMC River East Theatre, 322 E. Illinois St.

Tickets: $10-$15, $80-$210 for passes, chicago.filmfestival.com

BIG STARS

'Stone' (U.S.)

Big names: Edward Norton, Robert De Niro, Milla Jovovich

What it is: A prisoner nicknamed Stone (Norton) tries to convince his parole officer (De Niro) he's ready to go home. Stone's wife (Jovovich) uses more sultry ways to get the point across.

How it is: The various crises about God come from Religion 101, and for a movie heavy on dialogue, not much of "Stone" qualifies as terribly unique or provocative.

See it: 7 p.m. Thursday at Harris Theater (205 E. Randolph Drive), following red carpet featuring Norton and director John Curran.

'Conviction' (U.S.)

Big names: Hilary Swank, Sam Rockwell, Minnie Driver

What it is: The inspirational true story of how Betty Anne Waters (Swank), with help from her best pal (Driver), became an attorney just so she could try to free her brother Kenny (Rockwell), whom she believed was wrongly convicted of murder.

How it is: The sort of shallow, serious earnestness you expect in a Swank movie without the detail or the creativity to actually uplift.

See it: 6 p.m. Sunday

'Red' (U.S.)

Big names: Bruce Willis, Morgan Freeman, Helen Mirren, John

Malkovich, Mary-Louise Parker

What it is: Why is the CIA trying to kill Frank (Bruce Willis)? The ex-operative reunites with his old colleagues (Freeman, Mirren, Malkovich) to unravel a conspiracy while looking after a woman (Parker) he's fallen for.

How it is: A totally unoriginal bore that seems to think it's funny and special just because the people shooting guns are middle-aged or older.

See it: 6:30 p.m. Oct. 13

'Black Swan' (U.S.)

A ballerina (Natalie Portman) isn't too happy about competition from a new rival (Mila Kunis). Exciting and even sexual complications ensue. Directed by Darren Aronofsky.

See it: 8 p.m. Oct. 12—sold out

'Fair Game' (U.S.)

CIA operative Valerie Plame (Naomi Watts) and her husband (Sean Penn) get into hot water. You may have heard a bit about this real-life story. Directed by Doug Liman.

See it: 5 p.m. Oct. 17

'127 Hours' (U.S.)

Remember when mountain climber Aron Ralston cut off his arm to get out from under a boulder? Now James Franco, starring as Ralston, gets to experience that. Directed by Danny Boyle.

See it: 7 p.m. Oct. 13, following red carpet featuring Boyle

'Hereafter' (U.S.)

George (Matt Damon) knows something special about the afterlife. Spooky. Directed by Clint Eastwood.

See it: 6:15 p.m. Oct. 14

'Brother & Sister'

("Dos hermanos") (Argentina)

With their mother recently deceased, Marcos (Antonio Gasalla) may at last pursue his own happiness by participating in a play, though his conniving sister frequently gets in his way.

See it: 1 p.m. Sunday, 6:45 p.m. Oct. 17, 6:30 p.m. Oct. 18. Spanish with subtitles.

'Waste Land'

(UK/Brazil)

An artist creates portraits inspired by workers at Rio de Janeiro's Jardim Gramacho landfill.

See it: 4:30 p.m. Sunday, 8:40 p.m. Monday. English, Portuguese with subtitles.

'Drunkboat'

(U.S.)

Big names: John Malkovich, John Goodman. Mort (Malkovich) is a Vietnam vet who's trying to stay off the sauce after returning to his sister's home in the Chicago area.

See it: 8:30 p.m. Friday, 5:30 p.m. Saturday, 4:45 p.m. Oct. 14

'Mooz-lum'

(U.S.)

Big names: Danny Glover, Nia Long, Evan Ross ("ATL"). Tariq (Ross) goes to college and rejects his Muslim upbringing, while awkward flashbacks explain his resistance.

See it: 6 p.m. Sunday, 5:30 p.m. Oct. 12

LOCAL CONNECTION

'Trust' (U.S.)Big names:

Clive Owen, Catherine Keener, Viola Davis ("Doubt")

What it is: Fourteen-year-old Annie (Liana Liberato) makes friends online with a fellow teen who then admits to being 20, no, 25, no, in his 30s. After she meets the man in person, Annie, her mom, Lynn (Keener), and dad, Will (Owen), struggle to cope with the help of a therapist (Davis).

How it is: A huge step up from David Schwimmer's last directorial effort, "Run Fatboy Run," "Trust" chills while making its tragic situation disturbingly plausible.

See it: 5 p.m. Oct. 16, 8 p.m. Oct. 18, 8 p.m. Oct. 19

'Louder than a Bomb' (U.S.)What it is:

A documentary co-directed by Greg Jacobs and Gene Siskel's nephew Jon Siskel about Louder than a Bomb, the annual Chicago high school slam poetry contest that's the biggest of its kind in the world.

How it is: Uneven competition coverage and storytelling gaps don't feel so bad when the personalities are this colorfully real.

See it: 6 p.m. Monday, 1:30 p.m. Oct. 16, 3:30 p.m. Oct. 18

'Go for It!' (U.S.)What it is:

Carmen (Aimee Garcia) considers leaving her Logan Square-based dance crew for a dance school in California at the suggestion of a teacher (Al Bandiero). Carmen's friend Gina (Gina Rodriguez) makes some sassy comments.

How it is: Talk about an ill-advised exclamation point. Bleak and relentlessly cliché, "Go For It!" would at least join the list of mediocre coming-of-age movies featuring great dancing if not for its poorly rendered glimpses of casual racism, domestic violence and infidelity.

See it: 12:30 p.m. Saturday, 6:30 p.m. Oct. 14, 9 p.m. Oct. 16

'Norman' (U.S.)

Big names: Dan Byrd ("Easy A"), Emily Van Camp ("Brothers and Sisters"), Chicago native Richard Jenkins ("The Visitor"), Adam Goldberg ("Untitled"); the score is by Chicagoan Andrew Bird

What it is: Struggling to deal with his mother's death and his father's (Jenkins) cancer diagnosis, Norman (Byrd) claims that he has the sickness as well, a lie he didn't want the cute new girl (Van Camp) or the rest of the school to hear.

How it is: The script stinks on the page but sort of works on screen, thanks to excellent performances from Jenkins and Byrd.

See it: 3:30 p.m. Friday, 6 p.m. Oct. 17, 6:30 p.m. Oct. 19

Meet your 2010 Best Bartender, Megan Qualley

By Lisa Arnett

After tallying thousands of votes in this year's Best Bartender contest, we are happy to announce the winner: Megan Qualley of Sully's House (1501 N. Dayton St.) in Old Town. We caught up with her to chat in the wake of her big win.

You're the 2010 Best Bartender! How does it feel?

Honestly, this has been such a fun experience. I got to meet some of the greatest bartenders of Chicago (this year's Top 10 finalists) and also meet a lot of people who came in saying, "Hey, I saw your picture!" I am happy I was able to be a part of it all.

You started working in the service industry in your teens. What did you learn from your first years?

I don't want to sound cliché or corny, but really trying to give the customers what they need. I think great interaction is important and I try to be real with everybody. I'm not somebody else when I'm on the job; I'm Megan 100 percent of the time.

You're not a vodka drinker, but your signature drink for our competition was made with ginger-infused vodka. What's up with that?

I'm not a vodka drinker myself, but I know that vodka is one of the most popular spirits. I drink my vodka drink, but I prefer whiskey. I can't wait for Derby season when we have mint [at Sully's] and I get to make mint juleps. I make a good blueberry julep.

Qualley
LENNY GILMORE/METROMIX

We cast the big-screen versions of your high school reading list

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

Our English teachers would be proud. New York Magazine is reporting that "Moulin Rouge" director Baz Luhrmann is considering a "Great Gatsby" remake as his next project, with Leonardo DiCaprio, Tobey Maguire and Amanda Seyfried as Jay Gatsby, Nick Carraway and Daisy Buchanan, respectively. In light of this potentially awesome combination platter, we thought about whom we'd like to see in some other film adaptations of our favorite high school required reading.

'Lord of the Flies'

Zac Efron (from left) has evolved enough as an actor to play conflicted leader Ralph in this hedonistic island tale. We can easily see Matthew Lewis, who plays the downtrodden Neville Longbottom in the "Harry Potter" movies, as the downtrodden, asthmatic Piggy. Rory Culkin keeps the family name going as the evil Jack Merridew.

'A Raisin in the Sun'

Native Chicagoan Terrence Howard (from top) would shine in the lead role of Walter Lee Younger in this play set on the South Side. Jada Pinkett Smith could step in as his wife, Ruth, bringing along son Jaden Smith to play the Youngers' son, Travis.

'The Catcher in the Rye'

Maguire or Elijah Wood would've been great for the lead role of Holden Caulfield a few years ago, but age has taken it away from them. Instead, we'll turn to "Glee" star Chris Colfer (right) for a fresh-faced portrayal with great potential for a devil-may-care attitude.

'Oedipus Rex'

Joaquin Phoenix (from left) proved in "Gladiator" that he can take on ancient Rome, and proved in real life that he can take on creepy, so who better play the lead in Greece's creepiest mommy complex tale? Mel Gibson is both angry and grizzled enough to play King Laius, and although she's the same age as Phoenix in real life, Angelina Jolie is just the right level of tarty to play Queen Jocasta.

THE LIST

Really Bangkok dangerous

The boys are going to Bangkok! That's the debauchery destination for "The Hangover 2," director Todd Phillips told empireonline.com. Bradley Cooper, Zach Galifianakis and Ed Helms will be back for the sequel, as well as Ken Jeong as Mr. Chow. "There's gonna be some [bleeped]-up surprises," Phillips said. Shooting is scheduled to start this month.

Shia vs. Frankie

What does Shia LaBeouf have against former "Malcolm in the Middle" star Frankie Muniz? While deflecting credit for the success of "Wall Street: Money Never Sleeps" in a recent radio interview, LaBeouf said, "You could have put Frankie Muniz into any of the movies I've been in and those movies still would've still been No. 1," the New York Daily News reported. Down, Shia, down!

Race to 1 billion

YouTube loves Lady Gaga. The meat-dressed one is projected to hit 1 billion views about Oct. 20 if she stays on her current pace of 1.8 million a day, according to tubemogul.com. Justin Bieber is projected to hit 1 billion views about Nov. 1.
